The Banner Says...

A link to Dundee's exploration past comes home

by Sean Cairney

It was 150 years ago (February 15, 1874) this year that a baby boy was born in County Kildare, Ireland. He was the second of ten children and at the age of 10 the young boy would move with his family to England. Ernest Shackleton would go on to join the merchant navy at just the age of 16 and a life of exploration and adventure was born.

RRS Discovery

Shackleton would go on to become a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London, and in 1901 he was chosen to go on an expedition to Antarctica led by Antarctic explorer Robert Falcon Scott. The iconic Dundee built Royal Research Ship (RRS) Discovery was made specifically for Antarctic research and launched in 1901. The wooden vessel was the UK's first purpose-built Antarctic research ship, it was made for the ice and added to Dundee's reputation for shipbuilding. RRS Discovery is now a popular attraction and permanently moored at Dundee's Discovery Point alongside the incredible V&A Dundee.

The Boss

Its first venture to Antarctica carried both Robert Falcon Scott and Ernest Shackleton. Shackleton would then be chosen by Scott to take part in a sledging trek towards the South Pole. This was still early days of Polar exploration and they had basic provisions, but they managed to get closer to the Pole than anyone before them. Sadly weather, illness and inhospitable terrain forced them back and not realise their goals. Shackleton would of course not give up on his dream to make it to the South Pole and would go on to undertake a further three expeditions to the region and during those he inherited the nickname 'The Boss' due to his leadership qualities.

In 1904 Shackleton moved to Scotland and became Secretary of the Royal Scottish Geographical Society. Office life was not for him and left that role and turned to politics in Dundee but was unsuccessful with that. He also found employment at the Glasgow shipbuilders William Beardmore and Company. Mr Beardmore would go on to support one of Shackleton's expeditions and have the Beardmore Glacier in Antarctica named in his honour.

Sir Ernest Shackleton

Sir Ernest Shackleton, as he would become, was knighted by King Edward VII. In 1921 the Quest was the fourth and final ship to carry Shackleton to the Antarctic. On January 5th 1922 Shackleton suffered a massive heart attack and died at the age of 47. He never did make it to the South Pole, though he did get close and less than 100 miles from his target. What Shackleton did do was leave a huge legacy of exploration and human endurance. He was laid to rest in South Georgia and his grave headstone is made of Scottish granite.

In this issue

Dunfermline may be Scotland's newest city, it was awarded city status as part of Elizabeth II's Platinum Jubilee Civic Honours in 2022, that does not stop it from having an incredible history and with a medieval past. Some of Dunfermline's historic sites are waiting for you to explore and is an easy day trip from Edinburgh.

Greyfriars Bobby must be Scotland's most famous dog and likely one of the most known, and loved, dogs in history. Some fascinating new images have been released of this faithful companion and one of Edinburgh's most visited statues and graves. The story of Bobby is just another reason why there is nothing quite like man's best friend.

Robert McVitie was born in Scotland in 1809. He had a recipe for success with his baking business in Edinburgh. The family business would go on to be a global brand that many of us can now enjoy whether back in the UK or at home internationally with tens of millions of biscuits being sent worldwide.

The Hope Cross

As we go to press the RRS Sir David Attenborough is travelling off the Falkland Islands coast bound for the UK. The icebreaker is travelling over 7,000 miles from the southern Atlantic Ocean. On board is a special piece of cargo, the cross from Shackleton's Hope Point memorial. The Hope Cross was constructed at Grytviken whaling station in South Georgia by crew members of the Quest as a monument to Sir Ernest Shackleton following his death. Measuring almost 3 metres/10 feet tall by 1 metre/3 feet wide and weighing approximately 30kg/65lbs the cross will soon be able to be seen by many more than the few who make it each year to South Georgia.

There can be no place more fitting for Shackleton's Hope Point memorial to be displayed than at Dundee's Discovery Point museum; home of the RRS Discovery, the very ship that first carried Shackleton to Antarctica in 1901. This will be the first time it has been in the UK and allow a wider audience to view this important piece of Antarctic heritage and pay its respects to a legendary Polar explorer whose stories are revered the world over. The Hope Cross is due to arrive in Dundee in August and with it a part of Shackleton's pioneering legacy is returning to Scotland. 🇬🇧

New tour of Cathedral gravestones brings Orkney's past to life

St Magnus Cathedral Graveyard.

Locals and visitors can delve into Orkney's fascinating history and colourful characters of the past as revealed by the gravestones surrounding St Magnus Cathedral – through a new in-depth guided tour, available from this summer. The project has been made possible through the support of the Friends of St Magnus Cathedral who've helped fund a new Cathedral Curator post - filled earlier this year by Fran Flett Hollinrake who will be well known to many as Cathedral Custodian for many years and gifted local storyteller. During the hour-long tour guided by Fran, folk will encounter the many characters who have shaped Orkney's trajectory, or been affected by pivotal moments in its past.

Highlights include gravestones of the rich and famous, including the 19th century epitaph of Samuel Baikie of the Orkney family dynasty of Tankerness House. Brother of William Balfour Baikie, the renowned African missionary from Orkney buried inside the Cathedral, Samuel built the striking Town Hall opposite St Magnus Cathedral – and also much of Dundas Crescent. The tour will also showcase five war graves from WWI (three in War Grave Commission style), the mass graves where nave burials were relocated from inside the Cathedral, paupers' graves - and a gravestone somewhat uniquely featuring the date '30 February'.

Wealth of history

Fran explains the tours are aimed at people who want to get a view of Orkney over the centuries - through a grass roots lens, "It's often said death levels us all, and there is much to be learned by reading between the lines of someone's gravestone and how their contribution to society was recorded at the time in this most final of ways." One of Fran's favourite gravestones is that of Peter

Wick, the first Cathedral Custodian, who died in 1902 and whose photo is held by the Orkney Library and Archive: "His main job seems to have been to stop people from carving their names in the walls of the Cathedral! I think everyone would agree we've moved on since then – nowadays the Cathedral is admired around the world and seen as a marvel holding an age of amazing stories. And this new tour of the graveyard is just one way to prise open the lid on that wealth of history."

Chair of the Council's Education, Leisure and Housing Committee, Gwenda Shearer, said: "Fascination for Orkney and its history continues to grow the world over, as does local pride in our heritage – so it's with delight that we are launching this new tour to further celebrate the wonderful history embedded in St Magnus Cathedral."

St Magnus Cathedral was founded in 1137, and is of international significance. Built from local red and yellow sandstone, the cathedral is mostly Romanesque in style. It is dedicated to St Magnus, Earl of Orkney in the 12th century, at a time when Orkney was part of the Kingdom of Norway. He was killed on the orders of his cousin and rival Hakon, and many miracles were reported after this death. In 1137 Magnus's nephew Rognvald began construction of the 'fine minster' in honour of his saintly uncle; Magnus's relics remain interred in a pillar of the choir. The cathedral has stood firm against Reformers, Cromwellian troops and wartime danger, and is the most complete medieval cathedral in Scotland.

HM The King takes on RSCDS Patronage

The Royal Scottish Country Dance Society (RSCDS) are honoured to confirm that, after receiving correspondence from Buckingham Palace, a review of the Patronages of The Late Queen has taken place and His Majesty King Charles III has accepted the Patronage of The Royal Scottish Country Dance Society. The King will be the Society's second Royal Patron, succeeding The late Queen Elizabeth II, who was Patron of the Society from 1947, as HRH Princess Elizabeth until her death in 2022. The title "Royal" was bestowed by King George VI in 1951, the year before the late Queen's accession to the throne. Chair of the RSCDS William Williamson said, "His Majesty The King, like the late Queen, has always expressed his affection for Scotland and its culture. With this news we look forward to his continued interest in the life of The Royal Scottish Country Dance Society. I hope you will, when the opportunity arises, raise a glass to our new Patron and the future of our Society."

The RSCDS expresses deep gratitude to The King for his ongoing support of the Society and for assuming the role of Patron.

The Battle of Bannockburn

- In June 1314 the history of Scotland as a nation was about to change forever. At the Battle of Bannockburn Robert the Bruce, King of Scots, faced down the English army led by Edward II. Edward, keen to retain the stronghold of Stirling Castle, had led a huge army through Scotland to lift the Scots' siege of his garrison at the castle. Achieving this was vital to Edward's hopes of re-establishing his weakening grip on the country, but he was stopped short by the army of Robert Bruce.
- Over the two days of battle, 23-24 June, Edward's army was repeatedly thwarted by the Scots' stubborn resistance before finally finding itself trapped by the surrounding terrain with no room to manoeuvre their huge force. The result was an unprecedented rout of King Edward's army.
- Robert Burns would visit Bannockburn in 1787 and later wrote his famous poem Scots Wha Hae about the battle.
- Located near the historic city of Stirling, the site still evokes the landscape that would have been seen by medieval soldiers in 1314, when the area was a royal hunting park. Today the Battle of Bannockburn Visitor Centre harnesses 3D technology to bring Scottish history to life. You can stand shoulder-to-shoulder with medieval warriors and armoured knights while learning about the tactics of two opposing kings in a truly immersive experience. Visitors witness the sights and sounds of medieval battle first-hand including ancient battle strategies, weapons and armour in what was a crucial event in Scottish history.

Ever wanted to know what happened to your old pal from home, how to make your favourite Scottish meal, or wondered about a certain bit of Scottish history?

Dumbarton Castle

Dumbarton Castle commands a striking presence as it sits on a volcanic rock overlooking the Firth of Clyde. Its history is as remarkable as its landscape, having been a royal refuge, a military stronghold, and a silent witness to many significant events in Scotland's past.

With roots stretching back to the Iron Age, Dumbarton was once the capital of the ancient kingdom of Strathclyde. Its strategic position made it a coveted asset through the centuries.

In the year 870, the Vikings, led by the fierce Olaf and Ivar, laid siege to the castle, known then as Alt Clut, the rock of the Clyde. This stronghold was the heart of the Kingdom of Strathclyde. The Vikings encircled the rock, cutting off any escape, and after a brutal four-month siege, they conquered the fortress.

By the Middle Ages, it became a formidable fortress, with Scottish kings like Alexander II and James IV strengthening its defences.

The castle played pivotal roles during the Wars of Scottish Independence and saw action up to the Second World War. It's also famed for being the prison of William Wallace for a short period before he was taken to London for execution.

Today, Dumbarton Castle stands not just as a monument to Scottish resilience and strategy, but also as a treasure trove for history enthusiasts. The twin peaks of the rock, known as The Beak and The Summit, provide panoramic views that are well worth the climb, offering a serene vantage point to ponder the turbulent history that unfolded below.

The search for Nessie

The following is a true story! It was misty and somewhat cool August 1997 afternoon, we visited from our 2 year home in Castiogne Dela Steverie in Italy to Loch Ness! While my beautiful wife Serene and our two Scottish friends were watching me at the beach side of the loch from the top of Castle Urquhart, I stood close to the edge and said in a yelling voice, "Hey Nessie, if you are real, I demand you show yourself!" All of a sudden I saw ripples in the water, and heard a loud grumbling sound! I ran so fast to the Castle that you would have thought that I was Eric Liddell, the Great Scottish Olympian runner of Chariots of Fire movie fame! The moral of this story is, if you don't want to get eaten by Nessie, then don't tease or challenge her!

Family research help

I wonder if any readers can help me please? I am doing my family history. My family came from the Scottish Borders and belonged to the Free Church of Scotland. What I am in need of help with is where the files and records are kept. My family is Johnston/Johstoun. I am getting back into family research so I would appreciate any help I can get. I have been told these people were around 1800?

Tartan Day in Ottawa

The Sons of Scotland Pipe Band in Ottawa, Canada enjoyed a big Tartan Day weekend in their nation's capital which saw a new Tartan Day Expo added to the National Tartan Day Celebrations held for the 16th time on Parliament Hill. The Expo saw many exhibitors of Celtic fare, fashion and homemade creations, there was live music, and refreshments, and lots of wonderful raffle prizes – and an audience of hundreds that came out to support this inaugural event. The following day, the massed band was joined by friends in the dancing community – highland, step, and Scottish country- as well as singing and corgis on parade for an exceptional day marking heritage and tradition. It was also the first time the band's new Patron was out to support their efforts, His Excellency Mr. Whit Grant Fraser, C.C., who enjoyed the day's celebrations very much. He was moved by the talents of many, and gave his support of everyone's great work.

We look ahead to trips to Scotland, Ireland, the Invictus Games 2025, and more – and you can be part of our adventures. Visit us at www.sospb.com for all the details.

Tartan Day

In the April issue of the Scottish Banner, you asked the question of what we thought about the varying dates for Tartan Day. I must admit that I find the date of 6th of April for Tartan Day in Canada and the USA a bit strange as the date has nothing to do with actual tartan and in fact, it's doubtful that it even existed back then considering the oldest tartan pattern known is dated between 1500 and 1600.

Yes, they made it about the Declaration of Arbroath but that was in 1320 when Canada and the USA didn't exist as we know it. Australia and New Zealand got it absolutely right by celebrating International Tartan Day on the 1st of July, the actual date of repeal from the banning of wearing tartan from the Act of Proscription in 1747.

Well done Down Under.

Best regards,

Tartan Day April 6 in Canada

I think likely April 6 was selected for Tartan Day in Canada due to our nation's celebration of Canada Day being July 1st annually-where we celebrate all cultures of all Canadians both born to Canada, and those who have made Canada their home, after arriving from elsewhere in the world. I'm a born Canadian, second generation with my Grandparents emigrating from Scotland in the 1920's, and married to a first generation Canadian, whose parents arrived from Scotland shortly before his birth in the 50's-he always jokes he was "made" in Scotland, but "born" in Canada.

SCOTSPEAK

Scotspeak is a selection of quotes which made headlines in Scotland last month on a variety of current Scottish affairs.

“The Southern Upland Way was Southern Scotland’s first long distance footpath and the first official coast to coast path in Britain. It takes people through some of the best of the region’s coastline, hills, forests and valleys and is a great way to experience the wild scenery of Dumfries and Galloway. This new exhibition is a perfect way to celebrate 40 years of this spectacular path.”

Councillor Ian Carruthers, Chair of Dumfries and Galloway Councils Economy and Resources committee, said at the launch of a new exhibition on the Southern Upland Way which is celebrating 40 years. The Southern Upland Way, Scotland’s Coast to Coast path, was officially opened on 27 April 1984. Since then, thousands of people have walked, or more recently cycled, the 214 miles from Portpatrick on the west coast of the Rhinns of Galloway to Cockburnspath on the east coast of the Scottish Borders.

“Having been born and raised on the Isle of Lewis, the most northerly of the Outer Hebrides, I am thrilled to set sail on this exciting podcast journey, exploring the rich tapestry of stories that weave through Scotland’s west coast islands. ‘Scottish Island Adventures’ is more than a podcast; it’s an invitation to join me on a captivating voyage, where we’ll uncover the island’s unique stories, their charm, their people and savour the flavours of our dishes. Join me as we set sail on a virtual voyage that will inspire visitors, both old and new, to travel over the seas to explore the heart and soul of each island, one captivating episode at a time.”

The Hebridean Baker, Coinneach Macleod, said his new podcast series is set to take listeners on a voyage around Scotland’s storied islands. The CalMac podcast will transport listeners to Scotland’s west coast in a series of ten episodes, and will each focus on a different island. Host Coinneach Macleod, also known as the ‘Hebridean Baker’, will be joined by various guests as he uncovers ‘Scotland in miniature’ on the Isle of Arran, visits Islay and Jura to learn about the islands’ world-famous distilleries, and witnesses Skye’s incredible natural attractions.

“Cairns’ painting and the personal collections of other Second World War veterans inspired us to produce this display to examine the creation, use and reinterpretation of maps. Maps: Memories of the Second World War explores the purpose of a map as much more than just a physical or a functional object and reveals the stories of the people who kept these maps as a memory of a personal journey.”

Julie Gibb, Assistant Curator of Science at National Museums Scotland said a new display at the National War Museum in Edinburgh Castle explores the purpose, importance and personal significance of military maps in the Second World War. The display was inspired by the painting, ‘Major Robert W. Cairns MBE, TD, MA Father’s Memorabilia, North West Europe’, (1995), by Joyce W Cairns. Major Robert W. Cairns MBE served in various posts and locations during the war. From 1943, he was responsible for organising the travel network for the movement of troops and supplies across the inadequate and congested roads of Northern Europe. The painting depicts the artist’s father’s memorabilia from the Second World War. The maps and photographs in Maps: Memories from the Second World War are now on display until 25 Jan 2026.

“While the contexts for singing are currently in decline, the music continues to be a soundscape to a way of life for many people. The purpose of this exhibition is to explore how sacred singing was, and continues to be, integral to many aspects of community life, and to highlight the wealth of hymns, psalms and spiritual songs being sung in the region today. Language is a way to express culture. The deep spiritual connection it has with its people and the role which music plays in this, must be recognised and supported into the future if we are to keep some of the most precious aspects of Gaelic culture alive.”

Dr Frances Wilkins, Senior Lecturer in Ethnomusicology at the Elphinstone Institute, University of Aberdeen, said research to highlight traditional forms of Gaelic singing has now been turned into an exhibition which will tour Hebridean communities in 2024 and 2025. Visitors can learn more about sacred song traditions of the region and explore sound recordings, film, objects, and a digital archive, soundmap and interactive virtual tour.

“There is a widespread misconception that water resources are always abundant across Scotland because it’s ‘always raining’, and this has led to this precious resource being largely undervalued. However, we are experiencing more extremes in our weather, and while this can result in very intense rainfall events, it can also lead to much longer periods of lower rainfall. Added to this we are also seeing the demand for water increase, which combined with periods of reduced available water, is increasing our national vulnerability to water scarcity.”

Dr Sarah Halliday, Reader at University of Dundee’s Division of Energy, Environment and Society, said immediate action must be taken to tackle water scarcity in Scotland. Dr Halliday says the combination of prolonged dry periods, brought on by weather changes created through climate change, and an increase in water usage is leaving Scotland vulnerable. A typical domestic customer in Scotland now uses around 180 litres per day, which is ‘significantly higher’ than other parts of the UK and Europe, the report has revealed.

Glasgow tunes up for Scotland's biggest week of bagpipes this August Piping Live! festival and the World Pipe Band Championships get set for summer of sound.

Glasgow is set to host Scotland's biggest week of bagpipes this summer, with the return of Piping Live! from Saturday 10th - Sunday 18th August, and The World Pipe Band Championships on Friday 16th and Saturday 17th August. The world's biggest piping festival, Piping Live! attracts over 30,000 attendees to Glasgow each year, with an eclectic programme of events for pipers and music lovers alike to be held at venues across the city. Run by the National Piping Centre and now in its 21st year, the festival will have lively concerts, captivating recitals, hard-fought competitions, engaging workshops and energetic sessions involving 700 musicians on the musical menu across its nine days, including a swathe of free and ticketed events.

The World Pipe Band Championships – a major event which Glasgow first hosted in 1948 and the city has staged every year since 1986 – attracts thousands of pipers and drummers from all over the world to compete in the ultimate 'battle of the bands'. Organised on behalf of the Royal Scottish Pipe Band Association by Glasgow Life – the charity which delivers culture and sport in Glasgow. Social media sensation Ally Crowley-Duncan, known online as Piper Ally with a combined following of over 4 million for her innovative piping content, will be flying in to take part in Piping Live!. Originally from New York, Ally will be performing and hosting a Q&A as part of the Street Cafe, taking part in the Piping Live! Big Band, and acting as a secret judge in competitions across the week.

The sound of the pipes to the streets of Glasgow

Ally the Piper, said: "Being part of Piping Live! is like standing on the grandest stage of bagpipe mastery. It's where the world's finest gather to showcase their talents and where every note carries the weight of centuries of tradition. To be invited back to this world-renowned festival is an amazing moment for me in my musical journey and I can't wait to share the experiences I have with all of my followers. Even though my career in bagpiping largely exists outside of the traditional, I'm immensely grateful for the opportunity to stay connected to the community, and immerse myself once again in the atmosphere of Piping Live! and I am really looking forward to being back in the beautiful country of Scotland and reconnecting with old friends, having first taken part with the Scotia Glenville Pipe Band (now the Capital District Youth Pipe Band) in 2012."

The spectacular sonic week includes the iconic Piping Live! Big Band welcoming pipers and drummers of all ages and abilities to join the festival's mass participation event, filling the city centre streets with music as they march from Mansfield Park in Partick to Kelvingrove Art Gallery and Museum. Also taking place are free, open-air performances by pipe bands from across the globe taking place each day. Including sets from the Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo Pipes and Drums, the City of Angels Pipe Band from LA, and Old Scotch Pipes and Drums from Australia, these performances offer a fantastic chance to experience world-class piping in the bustling heart of the city centre. In Glasgow's West End, the iconic Kelvingrove Art Gallery and Museum will host a recital by an amazing international artist each day of the festival at 2pm, showcasing bagpiping traditions from around the world in the breathtaking Centre Hall.

Finlay MacDonald, Artist Director for Piping Live!, said: "We are proud and excited to be able to bring the 21st edition of Piping Live! to the city of Glasgow. We are thankful to our supporters, performers, participants and funders who have continued to support this event through some challenging times for the creative industries. As the popularity of piping and traditional music continues to grow and thrive, we have created a diverse, inclusive and engaging programme, showcasing the breadth and depth of the piping traditions whilst celebrating world, indigenous and modern traditional music. There are opportunities for pipers of all levels and ages, whether in competitions, at our Big Band event, or for those who fancy a go, our come and Try Sessions. You don't have to be a piper to enjoy and take part in Piping Live!, Piping is for everyone and we look forward to bringing the sound of the pipes to the streets of Glasgow."

The very best pipe bands on the planet

The week will come to a fitting crescendo with The World Pipe Band Championships at the iconic Glasgow Green with bands competing from across Scotland and the world in all grades. This year's 'Worlds' promises another fiercely-fought competition involving the very best pipe bands on the planet. Royal Scottish Pipe Band Association Chief Executive, Colin Mulhern, said: "Last year's spectacular World Pipe Band Championships, which attracted a fantastic attendance from bands from almost every corner of the globe as well as spectators from near and far, demonstrated just how much this iconic event means to the international piping community, and how much interest there is in the music of Scotland's national instrument. This year's 'Worlds' promises another superb showcase of piping and drumming, and – judging from the number and very strong contingent of bands already signed up – we can look forward to an incredible, hard-fought contest."

Glasgow Life Chair and Glasgow City Council Convenor for Culture, Sport and International Relations, Bailie Annette Christie, said: "As a UNESCO City of Music, Glasgow has a great international reputation as a fantastic destination for lovers of all types of music, and there's certainly nowhere better to enjoy world-class piping. With the city hosting both the world's biggest piping festival and the pinnacle of the global piping competitive calendar, Glasgow is looking forward to resounding with our national instrument's very best talent in August."

Celebrating Scotland's culture and music and providing fantastic entertainment, Piping Live! and the Worlds are firmly established highlights of the city's summer events programme. Attracting thousands of pipers and spectators, boosting Glasgow's visitor economy and further enhancing its international profile, these much-loved events are extremely important to our city."

Piping Live! 2024 takes place from Saturday 10th - Sunday 18th August. For more information and tickets see: www.pipinglive.co.uk. The World Pipe Band Championships take place on Friday 16th and Saturday 17th August. For more information and tickets see: www.theworlds.co.uk.

The Colouring Book of Scotland

The first colouring book dedicated to the beautiful landscapes and landmarks of Scotland. A unique Scottish colouring book suitable for adults as well as children featuring 20 of the country's most iconic places, including: Edinburgh Castle • Forth Rail Bridge • St Andrews • HMS Discovery, Dundee • Balmoral Castle • Loch Ness/Urquart Castle • Dunrobin • Castle, Stromness, Orkney • Skara Brae • Callanish Standing Stones • Highland Games • Eilean Donan • Tobermory, Skye • Caerlaverlock Castle • Abbotsford House • Melrose Abbey • Rosslyn Chapel • Falkirk Wheel • Stirling Castle and more. Price: $19.95 Plus postage

Culloden: Scotland's Last Battle and the Forging of the British Empire

Culloden changed the course of history by ending all hope of the Stuarts reclaiming the throne, cementing Hanoverian rule and forming the bedrock for the creation of the British Empire. This lively and provocative history looks afresh at the period & unveils its true significance, not only as the end of a struggle for the throne but the beginning of a new global power. A definitive account of the battle. Price: $29.95 Plus postage

Rose Nicolson: A vivid and passionate tale of 16th century Scotland

Rose Nicolson is a vivid, passionate and unforgettable novel of this most dramatic period of Scotland's history, told by a character whose rise mirrors the conflicts he narrates, the battles between faith and reason, love and friendship, self-interest and loyalty. It confirms Andrew Greig as one of the great contemporary writers of fiction. Price: $24.95 Plus postage

Wild History: Journeys through Lost Scotland

You scramble up over the dunes of an isolated beach. You climb to the summit of a lonely hill. And then you find them. The traces of the past. Perhaps they are marked by a tiny symbol on your map, perhaps not. There are no plaques to explain their fading presence before you. They are being reclaimed by nature. They are wild history. This book introduces many such places all over the country, from the ruins of prehistoric forts and ancient, arcane burial sites, to abandoned bothies and the derelict traces of old. Price: $49.95 Plus postage

The Outer Hebrides: A Historical Guide

The Outer Hebrides lie 40 miles to the west of mainland Scotland, forming a barrier to the North Atlantic. Culturally distinct from early prehistory, the islands contain a wealth of historical and archaeological monuments. In addition to descriptions of key historic sites from prehistory onwards and gazetteers covering every place of historical interest, this book also traces the development of the modern environment and landscape of the islands, enabling the visitor to appreciate the sites within their historical and cultural context. Price: $24.95 Plus postage

The Placenames of Scotland

Scotland is a land of many languages – including Gaelic, Pictish, Brythonic, Norse, Anglo-Saxon and Modern English among them. The result is an often bewildering series of overlapping layers of place-names, difficult at times to understand and even pronounce. This book, featuring 8,000 names ranging from districts, towns and villages to rivers, lochs and mountains, is the essential guide to Scottish placenames, illustrating the extent to which Scotland's languages were spoken over its territory. Price: $34.95 Plus postage

A Scots Quair-The Mearns Trilogy

One of the all-time greats of Scottish literature, truly revolutionary, A Scots Quair is a trilogy of novels: Sunset Song (1932), Cloud Howe (1933) and Grey Granite (1934). At each book's core is the heroine Chris Guthrie, as she grows from a child into adulthood through the Great War to the development of communism in the 1920s. Grassie Gibbon's writing is unique and riveting, blending Scots and English in an accessible style, and eloquent in its humanity and celebration of nature. Price: $34.95 plus postage

A History of Scotland

Historian Neil Oliver presents a compelling new portrait of Scottish history, peppered with action, high drama and centuries of turbulence that have helped to shape modern Scotland. Along the way, he takes in iconic landmarks and historic architecture; debunks myths surrounding Scotland's famous sons; recalls forgotten battles; charts the growth of patriotism; and explores recent political developments, capturing Scotland's sense of identity and celebrating her place in the wider world. Price: $29.95 Plus postage

The Picts

This is a new edition of this popular history of the Picts, an ancient nation who ruled most of northern and eastern Scotland during the Dark Ages. Despite their historical importance, they remain shrouded in myth and misconception. Absorbed by the kingdom of the Scots in the ninth century, they lost their unique identity, their language and their vibrant artistic culture. Tim Clarkson pieces together the evidence to tell the story of this mysterious people from their emergence in Roman times to their eventual disappearance. Price: $24.95 Plus postage

Islands of The Evening 14 centuries ago, Irish saints journeyed to the Hebrides and Scotland's Atlantic shore. They sought spiritual solitude in remote places, but their mission was also to spread the word of God to the peoples of Scotland. Columba was the most famous of these pioneers who rowed their currachs towards danger and uncertainty in a pagan land, but the many others are now largely forgotten. Moffat sets off in search of these elusive figures. As he follows in their footsteps, he finds their traces not so much in tangible remains as in the spirit and memory of the places that lay at the very edge of their world. Price: $34.95 Plus postage

Tracing Your Scottish Ancestors

This is a new edition of the bestselling guide to this increasingly popular pursuit. Scotland has the best-maintained records and facilities of any country in the world for undertaking family research. This is the National Archives' official guide and is written in an accessible style from the unique perspective of a custodian of the records. It details all the latest internet developments, including a chapter on family history on the web. It also points to more traditional resources, explaining step by step how to research records of births, marriages and wills. Price: $29.95 Plus postage

Clanlands in New Zealand: Kiwis, Kilts, and an Adventure Down Under

The highly anticipated follow-up to the worldwide bestseller, Clanlands, Sam & Graham continue their immersive buddy adventure, this time in New Zealand! Buckle up, grab a dram, and get ready for another unforgettable wild ride. They're back! Stars of Outlander, Sam Heughan and Graham McTavish are no strangers to the rugged beauty of Scotland. But this time they're setting their sights on a new horizon: New Zealand. Price: $34.95 Plus postage

The Faded Map: The Lost Kingdoms of Scotland

Modern communications have driven motorways and pylons through the countryside, dwarfed us with TV and telephone masts and drastically altered the way in which we move around, see and understand Scotland. Recent politics and logistics have established borders and jurisdictions which now seem permanent and impervious. The Faded Map looks beyond these to remember a land that was once quiet and green. It brings to vivid life the half-forgotten kings and kingdoms of two thousand years ago, of the time of the Romans, the Dark Ages and into the early medieval period. Price: $24.95 Plus postage

Para Handy

Para Handy has been sailing his way into the affections of generations of Scots since he first weighed anchor in 1905. The master mariner and his crew all play their part in evoking the irresistible atmosphere of a bygone age when puffers sailed between West Highland ports and the great city of Glasgow. This definitive edition contains all three collections published in the author's lifetime, as well as those that were unpublished and a new story which was discovered in 2001. Extensive notes accompany each story, providing fascinating insights into colloquialisms, place-names and historical events. This volume also includes a wealth of contemporary photographs, depicting the harbours, steamers and puffers from the age of the Vital Spark. Price: $29.95 Plus postage

Clans and Tartans of Scotland

The Scots are a remarkable race with a justifiably proud history and culture which they have successfully passed on through generations. This compact book sets out to identify the larger Scottish clan and family names, their tartans, septs (dependent family names), heraldic crests, mottos, ancestral lands and allegiances. This book features full colour photographs of each tartan as opposed to digital reproductions, allowing readers to see both the textures and patterns. Price: $19.95 Plus postage

On the Crofter's Trail

In the Clearances, once the mainstay of Highland life in Scotland, were swept away as the land was put over to sheep grazing. Many of the people of the Highlands and islands of Scotland were forced from their homes by landowners in the Clearances. David Craig sets out to discover how many of their stories survive in the memories of their descendants. He travels through 21 islands in Scotland and Canada, many thousands of miles of moor and glen, and presents the words of men and women of both countries as they recount the suffering of their forbears. Price: $29.95 Plus postage

Poacher's Pilgrimage: A Journey into Land and Soul

The islands of Scotland's Outer Hebrides boast some of the most remote and spectacular scenery in the world. They also feature an astonishing range of mysterious structures – stone circles, beehive dwellings, holy wells and 'temples' from the Celtic & prehistoric eras. Alastair McIntosh returned to the islands of his childhood to explore the meaning of these places. This book is a record of his pilgrimage – a walk through space and time, across a physical landscape and into a spiritual one. Here he reflects on an extraordinary place and on the people he encountered along the way, and explores a vision of imaginative hope for humankind. Price: $34.95 Plus postage

War Paths-Walking in the Shadows of the Clans

Alistair Moffat sets off in the footsteps of the Highland clans. In 12 journeys he explores places of conflict, recreating as he walks the tumult of battle. As he recounts the military prowess of the clans – surely the most feared fighting men in western Europe – he also speaks of their lives, their language and culture before it was all swept away. The disaster at Culloden in 1746 represented not just the defeat of the Jacobite dream but also the unleashing of merciless retribution from the British government which dealt the Highland clans a blow from which they would never recover. This is an exploration of many of the places and events which define a country's history. Price: $39.95 Plus postage

POLLY The True Story Behind 'Whisky Galore'

In 1941, the ship SS Politician ran aground in the Outer Hebrides. Among its cargo were 260,000 bottles of whisky destined for America – a godsend to the local Eriskay islanders whose home-grown supply had dried up due to rationing. The story is known through Whisky Galore. This book tells the true story of one of the most bizarre events to have happened in Scottish waters. Price: $19.95 Plus postage

Scottish Miscellany: Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Scotland the Brave Why is the tartan so important? What is worn under a kilt? How much of the story in Braveheart is real? Revel in the fun and fascinating explanations behind Scottish traditions and folklore-from William Wallace, Rob Roy, and MacBeth to golf, kilts, and haggis. Price: $24.95 Plus postage

The Hebrides

Paul Murton has spent half a lifetime exploring some of the most beautiful islands in the world – the Hebrides. He has travelled the length and breadth of the Scotland's rugged, 6,000 mile coast line, and sailed to over 80 islands. This book visits each of the Hebridean Islands in turn, introducing their myths and legends, history, culture & natural beauty. He also meets the people who live there and learns their story. A vivid account of the Hebrides and serves as unique guide to the less well-known aspects of life among the islands. Price: $44.95 Plus postage

The Highlands Paul Murton journeys the length and breadth of the beautiful Scottish Highlands. In addition to bringing a fresh eye to popular destinations such as Glencoe, Ben Nevis, Loch Ness and the Cairngorms, he also visits some remote and little-known locations. He meets a host of modern Highlanders, from caber tossers & gamekeepers to lairds to pipers. He uncovers some strange tales, myths and legends along the way: stories of Jacobites, clan warfare, murder and cattle rustling fill each chapter – as well as some hilarious anecdotes based on his personal experience of a place he loves to call home. Price: $44.95 Plus postage

The Viking Isles: Travels in Orkney and Shetland Paul Murton has long had a love of the Viking north – the island groups of Orkney and Shetland and the old counties of Caithness and Sutherland – which, for centuries, were part of the Nordic world. Today this fascinating Scandinavian legacy can be found everywhere – in physical remains, place-names, local traditions and folklore, and much else besides. This is full of observation, history, anecdote and encounters with those who live there, it also serves as a practical guide to the many places of interest. A real celebration of the Viking north's rich heritage. Price: $44.95 Plus postage

Scottish History Without the Boring Bits As an antidote to more sober accounts of Scotland's history, Ian Crofton offers a colourful chronology of the eccentric, the infamous, the bawdy, the horrific and the hilarious people and events that have spattered across the pages of our nation's story. From the Royal High School riot to Morocco the Wonder Horse, from the War of the One-Eyed Woman to the MP cleared of stealing his ex-mistress's knickers, A History of Scotland Without the Boring Bits includes a host of little-known tales that you won't find in more conventional works of history. Price: $29.95 Plus postage

Whiskies Galore: A Tour of Scotland's Island Distilleries Island whiskies have long held a fascination and a powerful emotional draw on whisky drinkers. Their special combination of heritage, mystique, and remote location captures the imagination; their highly distinctive flavours are often imitated but seldom bettered. Join Ian Buxton on a journey across Scotland's islands. Combining an expert's knowledge of whisky with a travel writer's fondness for anecdote, and with a keen description of place, he provides a special treat for all who love the islands' magical drams. Price: $24.95 Plus postage

Scottish Gaelic in Twelve Weeks: With Audio Download Written both as a self-tuition course for beginners and also for use within the classroom. You may want to learn Gaelic because of a general interest in Celtic or Scottish history and culture, or because it was the everyday language of your ancestors. Each lesson in the book contains some essential points of grammar explained and illustrated, exercises, a list of new vocabulary (with a guide to pronunciation, using the International Phonetics Alphabet), and an item of conversation. This new edition includes an audio download link to hear pronunciation. Price: $34.95 Plus postage

Gaelic-English/English-Gaelic Dictionary Latest soft cover dictionary is ideal for learners of Gaelic at all levels, and its generous coverage of vocabulary from fields such as business and IT makes it a valuable tool for all those who require an up-to-date reference work. It contains a large amount of explanatory material, numerous examples of usage and idiomatic phrases and expressions. Many registers and styles are sampled, from the familiar (and occasionally the vulgar) to the formal and the literary. Price: $24.95 Plus postage

Tiel's Saga: Scottish Lore, Norse Roots For 7 centuries, Vikings raided and settled the coast of Scotland and the Hebrides Islands. During that time, the Norsemen and Gaels formed a unique culture as they intermarried and shared belief systems, folklore, and traditions. In this groundbreaking work, the author looks at 5 pieces of Scottish folklore and illuminates the influence of Norse myths in each. Each is accompanied by end notes which describe the sources and variations uncovered in author's research. Historical commentary as well as academic support is provided in appendices. Price: $34.95 Plus postage

History of Scottish Football in 100 Objects From Socrates to Arthur Montford, via Bovril, Buckfast and, of course, pies, this is a unique journey through the extraordinary world of Scottish football. Packed with anecdotes and observations, Andy Bollen wallows in a nostalgic haze, a time of hatchet-men with moustaches, a magic sponge that should have been granted miracle status and big-money strikers who couldn't hit a cow's posterior with a banjo. Opinionated, forthright and funny, Bollen reluctantly concedes that tattoos, hair weaves and VAR are now part of the game. This idiosyncratic ride through the wonderful absurdity of Scottish football with chime with every fan. Price: $24.95 Plus postage

A celebration of Scotland at the Melbourne Tartan Festival

With a skirl of pipes, the Melbourne Tartan Festival (MTF) will open with the annual Kirkin' 'O The Tartan service at The Scots' Church, Melbourne on Sunday 30th June. This year will celebrate the 150th anniversary of opening of the current Scot's Church building on the corner of Collins and Russell Streets, Melbourne. The Parade of Clans will be piped into the church, with each Clan being announced and welcomed in both Scottish Gaelic and English. The Melbourne Tartan Day Parade on Collins Street on Sunday 7th July is another festival highlight event. More than 200 pipers, drummers and dancers will be joined by Clan representatives as the official party leads them down Collins Street. Preceding the parade will be displays of dancing and piping on the terrace of the Old Treasury Building from 11.30am with pop-up events around the City, including the Block Arcade.

A CBD Scottish Connection guided walk with cultural historian, curator and tour leader Kenneth Park will commence at 10.00am—bookings essential. Tickets for the annual MTF Ceilidh dance with Melbourne Scottish Fiddlers at Collingwood Town Hall on the 12th July will see 200 dancers take to the floor, for what one enthusiast described as “a better workout than a session at the gym”!

During the month-long festival there will be concerts and recitals featuring Fiona Ross, Graeme McColgan ‘The Scotsman’, The Twa Bards and Claire Patti & Pria Schwall- Kearney, each showcasing different genres of Scottish music. The program includes the Victorian Pipers Association Solo Piping Championships, online and in person lectures, whisky tasting, genealogy, Burns Suppers, poetry in the park and pub and much more throughout the month of July.

The Main Hall of Melbourne Town Hall will be the setting for a grand and ceremonial welcome befitting the Office of the Lord Lyon at the Gala Dinner and Concert on Saturday 20th July, in what will be the premier event of the Melbourne Tartan Festival. Dr Joseph Morrow CVO CBE KStJ KC LLD DL FRSE, the Right Honourable the Lord Lyon King of Arms has accepted an invitation to be our Guest of Honour. Guests will be piped in on arrival to enjoy drinks and canapés in the Town Hall foyer before entering the glittering Main Hall for a sumptuous gourmet meal accompanied by an assortment of fine wines, and traditional and contemporary concert style entertainment. This will be a night to remember as we welcome the Lord Lyon King of Arms to Australia.

Visit the Melbourne Tartan Festival website for the full program, with more events being added weekly at: www.melbournetartanfestival.com.au and follow the Facebook page.

The Lord Lyon.

New First Minister nominated

John Swinney has been nominated as the seventh First Minister of Scotland, following a vote in the Scottish Parliament in May. MSPs voted 64 to 57 to select Mr Swinney as First Minister from a total of four nominees. There were seven abstentions. Mr Swinney was formally appointed as First Minister with a Royal Warrant from His Majesty King Charles III. He was later officially sworn in at the Court of Session, and took the Official Oath in front of the Lord President of the Court of Session and other senior judges. This comes just over a year after Humza Yousaf took the post in 2023. Humza Yousaf was the youngest and first person of colour to hold the office of Scotland's First Minister and formally stepped down in May after announcing his intention to do so in late April. At his time of appointment, he was the first Muslim leader of any Western nation.

First Minister John Swinney, 60, said: "It is an extraordinary privilege and it is my honour to accept the office of First Minister, committing myself to do the best I can for Scotland. I will be unapologetic about bringing to this Parliament the measures we can take to eradicate child poverty and I look forward to seeking the support of others to achieve that aim. I recognise, that is how it is going to have to work. I am leading a minority Government. I will need to reach out to others to make things happen. If we want to fund our schools and our hospitals, if we want to give our businesses a competitive edge, if we want to take climate action, if we want to eradicate child poverty, if we want to change people's lives for the better, we have to work together to do so. I commit my Government to working to create that agreement across the Chamber. I hope there is the space and the willingness for that to happen in the interests of the people who sent us here. To the people of Scotland I would simply say this. I offer myself to be the First Minister for everyone in Scotland. I am here to serve you. I will give everything I have to build the best future for our country."

First Minister John Swinney has also formed a majority female cabinet, including Kate Forbes who has been appointed Deputy First Minister.

Luca leapfrogs Noah to top Baby Names chart

Luca was Scotland's top name for baby boys for the first time in 2023, according to new figures released by National Records of Scotland (NRS). Luca climbed four places to the top spot with 344 baby boys given the name. Last year's most popular name, Noah, is pushed into second place, while Leo remains third. Jack has dropped out of the top three names for boys for the first time since 1996, falling to fourth place. Isla returns to the top slot for the first time since 2020, overtaking Olivia, the most popular name for girls in recent years. Freya is still the third most popular girls' name.

NRS Statistician Phillipa Haxton said: "National Records of Scotland is pleased to welcome all of Scotland's bundles of joy in 2023. There are more names in use today than there were in previous generations. The number of different names for boys reached a new all-time high in 2023, as did the number of unique names given to only one child in the year. The same pattern was observed for girls' names, and the variety of names given to girls is still greater than for boys."

Some of the names rising in use are associated with movies. Luca is now Scotland's top name for baby boys, rising from 43rd in the charts before the release of the 2021 Pixar movie of the same name. Meanwhile the names of actors in the summer blockbuster movies Oppenheimer and Barbie further increased in popularity, with Cillian up 24 to 99th in the list and Margot up 57 places to 106th. New entrants in the top 100 names include Oakley, which rose 64 places to 87th and Mabel, which leapt 102 places to joint 93rd. Choices for baby names differ across Scotland's 32 local authorities. Luca was top in seven areas and Isla in eight. Luca and Isla were top in Moray and North Ayrshire but Luca shared the top spot for boys with several names.

Biggest change in 200-plus years to Aberdeen's Union Street starts

Aberdeen leaders hailed the start of works upgrading a section of Aberdeen's main thoroughfare of Union Street as a major milestone to revitalising the Granite Mile – the biggest change to the street since it was built more than 200 years ago.

The works to the Union Street Central area - between the Market Street and Bridge Street junctions – will make it more attractive and vibrant while promoting walking and cycling as part of the City Centre and Beach Masterplan. The works include new pavements of Scottish whinstone, a road surface with locally-sourced granite, cycle lanes, and will help to create a plaza pavement entrance to the new market building. Aberdeen City Council Co-Leader Councillor Christian Allard said: "The new high-quality streetscaping for Union Street Central is the next step to make Aberdeen's city centre a great destination for residents and visitors to enjoy. Union Street which is 200 years old is due a makeover - a local makeover as local and Scottish materials are being used for the streetscaping which will help the economy."

Works are due to be completed, depending on what is uncovered by utility companies, weather, and world-wide supply-chain availability of materials, in autumn 2025.

Rare artefacts go on display for first time in new exhibitions in Lewis

Rare objects representing thousands of years of island life, from the Neolithic to the Viking Age, have gone on display in Lewis. More than 40 artefacts on loan from National Museums Scotland, including some displayed for the first time, feature in new exhibitions at Comunn Eachdraidh Nis and the Kinloch Historical Society Museum. The artefacts were discovered at sites across Lewis and include a unique, complete 2500-year-old pot from Allt Cleascro, Achmore, found buried deep in peat, and an exceptionally rare example of pre-Viking Age Scandinavian craftsmanship. The intricately decorated bronze mount was converted into a buckle during the Viking period and worn on its journey to Scotland. Brought together for the first time the objects provide an insight into the island's deep past, revealing how people have lived and thrived in this area for thousands of years. Na Dorsan opened at Comunn Eachdraidh Nis and charts the history of the Galson area. The objects, discovered on the Galson coastline, tell the fascinating story from the first farmers in the area, some 6,000 years ago, through to the arrival of Vikings on the island.

Archaeology Homecoming at the newly accredited Kinloch Historical Society Museum, also raises awareness of the area's rich archaeology. The exhibition highlights remarkable finds like the Achmore pot, and significant features within the local landscape such as Sidival Stone circle. Dr Fraser Hunter, Principal Curator of Prehistory and Roman Archaeology at National Museums Scotland, said: "It's been a real treat collaborating on these exhibitions with our colleagues in Nis and Kinloch. These objects help bring the distant past to life, from elegant bone tools from Galson that show the craft skills of the Iron Age to the remarkable Viking-period bronze mount from Ath Linne, which is a unique find for Scotland."

Study sheds new light on Scotland's beavers

A study by the University of Stirling has shed new light on how beavers reintroduced to Scotland indirectly interact with deer – and the implications for the woodlands they share. Researchers found that almost two thirds of trees felled by beavers produced new shoots, which were more abundant and concentrated closer to the ground than on other trees. This could diversify woodland structure into a mix of short and tall tree stems, which ought to boost biodiversity, according to researchers in the Faculty of Natural Sciences. The research, which also involved researchers at NatureScot and the James Hutton Institute, was carried out in eastern Scotland in established beaver territories by studying almost 800 trees. Scientists compared the number of shoots on beaver-felled trees to standing trees and collected 156 shoots with four different combinations of beaver and deer browsing to compare their nutrient levels and physical characteristics. Beavers were hunted to extinction in Scotland about four centuries ago. A formal multi-agency programme of reintroduction involving experts at the University of Stirling and the study partners – the first of its kind for a mammal species anywhere in Britain – began in 2009 in Argyll.

Dr Kelsey Wilson, who led the new study as part of her PhD research at the University of Stirling, said: "Beavers have gradually returned, sometimes after long absences, into riverside or riparian woodlands often shared with large populations of browsing deer. Beavers use their sharp teeth to cut down riverside trees of different sizes and species. Their most favoured trees, such as willows, usually respond by vigorously sprouting a crown of new shoots - similar to what happens with traditional tree coppicing. We found that almost two thirds of trees produced new shoots after being felled by beavers. These shoots were more abundant, nutritious, and concentrated closer to the ground than on other trees, making them an easily accessible food source for foraging deer."

Gates reopen to famous castles and gardens across Scotland

As Aberdeenshire's iconic Craigievar Castle, and the community-run Braemar Castle open their doors following extensive multimillion pound refurbishments, visitors should make the most of the blooms and sunshine with a visit to these and many more of Scotland's estates, walled gardens and castles as they reopen for the season. Whether an afternoon picnic amongst nature or stepping back in time to marvel at the ancient tales and architecture, find the latest gardens and castle news as well as unique events taking place across Scotland below, to inspire the ultimate day out during a break away.

Castles reopening

Over twenty Historic Environment Scotland (HES) sites have reopened their doors to welcome visitors, as well as several heritage locations too. This includes Lochleven Castle, which famously held Mary Queen of Scots imprisoned in 1567; Iron Age archaeology at the Broch of Gurness; dark historical tales from Hermitage Castle, Spynie Palace, Newark Castle and Scotland's only circular castle, Rothesay Castle, following essential conservation work. For the full list of reopenings and prices for admission, please visit: www.historicenvironment.scot

Braemar Castle, Aberdeenshire

Built by the Earl of Mar in 1628, Braemar Castle has been a hunting lodge, fortress, garrison and family home. An iconic 17th century landmark in the heart of the Cairngorms National Park. The castle's future rests with the small community of Braemar, and over the past ten years the village has been working to raise funds and gradually conserve and restore the castle to provide even better facilities for future visitors. As a result of the communities' efforts, Braemar Castle is opening its doors following a £1.6 million restoration programme to re-render the exterior.

Craigievar Castle, Aberdeenshire

An example of the best of Scottish Baronial architecture, Craigievar Castle fits naturally amongst the rolling hills of Aberdeenshire.

The elegant pink tower of Craigievar Castle was completed in 1626 and is amongst the most loved in Scotland. The castle is currently undergoing a major conservation project to carry out essential maintenance work, including refreshing the lime wash that gives Craigievar its distinctive and beloved pink colour. Visitors will be treated to a grand reveal in the coming months, when the new exterior is unveiled.

Gardens reopening

Kailzie Gardens, Scottish Borders

Kailzie Gardens is a renowned garden and woodland a mile east of Peebles in the Scottish Borders, with 20 acres to explore. Kailzie Gardens also boasts the popular Courtyard Café that has become a firm favourite with locals. Their seasonal shop offers local produce, gifts and plant sales, as well as a children's nature trail and a chance to have a go on the Gardener's 18-hole putting green, or a game of pétanque.

Amisfield Walled Garden, East Lothian

A hidden gem lying on the outskirts of Haddington in East Lothian, Amisfield Walled Garden dates back to the late 18th century and is one of the largest walled gardens in Scotland, with extensive herbaceous borders, fruit and vegetable beds, wildflower meadow, orchard and woodland to explore. The Garden is currently being restored and developed as a community garden by the Amisfield Preservation Trust and a band of volunteers, providing a venue for education and training for people of all abilities.

The Japanese Garden at Cowden, Clackmannanshire

Those looking to embrace serenity should look no further than the beautiful grounds of The Japanese Garden at Cowden. The woodlands and gardens are adorned with an array of exceptional plants and flora which are elevated by the tranquil essence of its Japanese-inspired design and structures, creating a unique and utterly authentic bridge between Scottish and Japanese culture. Numbers in the garden are restricted so that its peaceful atmosphere is not compromised, but despite that, 40,000 people still visit every year. Today Cowden has a team of full-time gardeners, a thriving cafe, and the Stewart Adventure Woodland where children can let off steam.

Da Gairdins, Shetland

This 60-acre site (of which one third is maintained woodland and gardens) is an area of outstanding natural beauty on the Westside of Shetland. Avid wildlife watchers can experience the diversity of Shetland's wildlife as, due to its proximity to the sea and the salt marsh dividing the gardens between the sea, the area is a magnet for nesting and migrating birds. Wander around and sit on one of the many benches to witness firsthand the fact that Shetland is not a tree-less landscape like many would believe, but instead is an oasis of life, with a surprisingly mild climate, thanks to the North Atlantic Drift which surrounds this captivating location.

Carolside House & Gardens, Scottish Borders

Carolside is an 18th century mansion set in beautiful parkland flanked by wooded hills, nestling in a bend of the River Leader. Carolside is one of Scotland's finest Private Gardens and is best known for its collection of historic roses, many of them rare today and is home to the National Collection of Gallica Roses.

Crawick Multiverse, Dumfries & Galloway

Located near Sanquhar and spanning the equivalent of over 36 football pitches, Crawick Multiverse is a unique location of outstanding artistic and historical interest and is not to be missed. Designed and constructed on the site of a former open-cast coal mine by renowned landscape architect Charles Jencks between 2011 and 2017. Feel the spiritual and astrological magic of the landforms through the striking landscape, opt to have a picnic in the Sun Amphitheatre, photograph the incredible 360 views of the site and Upper Nithsdale Valley from the Northpoint or peer inside the 'cave' of the Omphalos; there's plenty to see and do.

New photos of Greyfriars Bobby unveiled

Friends of Dalry Cemetery volunteer Lani Knott with the newly unveiled photograph of Greyfriars Bobby in Greyfriars Kirk.

By: Jakob Assarsson, Friends of Dalry Cemetery

Greyfriars Bobby needs no introduction. He's one of the most recognizable figures in Scottish history and probably one of the most famous dogs in the world. Yet despite a wealth of literature, and a Disney film, there remain open questions about who exactly this little dog was. Speaking strictly from the photographic record, there are two dogs purported to be Greyfriars Bobby. One, often named Greyfriars Bobby the First, appears in at least five photographs, taken by Edinburgh publisher Walter Greenoak Patterson around 1867. The other, Greyfriars Bobby the Second, appears in a single photograph of unknown date and origin.

Skye terrier

Before we continue, we must sadly put Greyfriars Bobby the Second to bed. In the cold light of day, a single photograph of a Skye terrier, with "Grayfriars Bobby" written on it, is not enough to suppose, as some have, that there was a second dog. Photographs are frequently mislabelled. On the balance of probability, we have no choice but to conclude that Greyfriars Bobby the Second was no Greyfriars Bobby at all, but a Greyfriars Red Herring.

Consequently, we must dismiss the hypothesis that Greyfriars Bobby the First died and was replaced prior to 1872 - the "two dog" theory. That so famous a dog could have been replaced by one of a different breed without raising any eyebrows already stretches the bounds of credulity. Perhaps most importantly, it means that Bobby was, probably, neither a purebred Skye terrier, nor a Dandie Dinmont, although they will forever remain an integral part of the legend of Greyfriars Bobby.

So, who was Greyfriars Bobby the First? If you visit Bobby's display at the Museum of Edinburgh, you will see the three images known prior to 2010. One shows Bobby with the family of John Traill, another with the family's children, and one by himself, the Museum's cabinet card-sized copy addressed to John Traill from WG Patterson. John Traill ran an establishment at 6 Greyfriars Place, at different times described as a coffee house, refreshment rooms, or a restaurant, always with Temperance added to signify that no alcohol was sold. Today, it is part of Alandas Gelato, with nothing but a neon sign reading "where the magic happens" to signify its historical ties to Bobby.

Bobby would visit and be fed at 6 Greyfriars Place, as he would visit other local homes and businesses in-between stints in Greyfriars Kirkyard. As time went on, the Traill family's role evolved to something like carers or owners, and it is for this reason they were photographed with the famous pooch. What is rather remarkable is that since 2010, three entirely new photos have come to light. Mine is the latest and the reason for this article. In 2010, a Flickr user posted an Edinburgh carte-de-visite photo of a small terrier in a cemetery. It was quickly pointed out that the photographer, WG Patterson, the graveyard setting, and the general appearance of the dog, suggested it might well be Greyfriars Bobby. Having compared the photograph to the location of John Gray's grave in Greyfriars Kirkyard, and the subsequently discovered photos of Bobby, I am confident that not only is this indeed Greyfriars Bobby, but Bobby at the famous graveside he may have mourned at.

A better understanding of Bobby

In 2022, another carte-de-visite of unknown ownership but with a remarkable resemblance to the renowned canine began to circulate in the media. Fresh on its heels, I discovered a further carte-de-visite in 2023. For the first time, we can assemble all of these photos together and gain a better understanding of Bobby. One of the first conclusions we can draw (yes, pun intended) is that the previously-known solo portrait is not a photograph, but a traced illustration of the photo I discovered, with some minor changes. Another is that being intended for commercial sale, the images were probably taken in order of saleability until the final, illustrated image was chosen for sale to the public.

Resembling the most strongly a traditional Victorian studio portrait, it is likely that the Traill family was photographed first. However, the inclusion of a family that not all intended customers would have been familiar with, and Bobby looking away from the camera in one photo and blurry-faced in the other, probably necessitated additional photos. From here it may have been decided that instead of with his current caretaker family, Bobby might be photographed at the famous graveside of John Gray, the man who may have been his former owner. With no further known photos in this Kirkyard series, we can hazard a guess that Bobby may not have been particularly cooperative in terms of adopting a mourning pose when prompted. We can also see from the shallow depth of field that the studio camera had been adjusted for a shorter exposure, probably to maximize chances of keeping a moving dog in focus.

Inability to secure a photo of Bobby suitably reposed may have led Patterson back to the studio, where Bobby was placed, by himself, on an ornamental pedestal. One photo shows his claws, in another they are absent - the photo with claws must have been taken first. Perhaps they were trimmed to soften Bobby's appearance. His coat, too, is brushed. In my photo, an alert, sitting Bobby, claws hidden and coat smooth, finally has his face in focus. For the first time, we can truly look Bobby in the face. He is unquestionably a terrier cross, resembling no breed in particular. He has teefs. He looks quite happy. So why was this relatively good photo made into an illustration for sale? Here, examining the minor changes is revealing. Bobby's right ear is lowered. His teeth are hidden. His eyes are made to gaze upward, his entire demeanour taking on an air of mournfulness. His body, made blurry by the shallow depth of field, is brought into sharp focus. Finally, Patterson had his sellable image of a sad Greyfriars Bobby. The rest is history.

Paisley Museum weaves new chapter in textile history

Paisley's rich textile history is being brought back to life, as part of a pioneering partnership which is helping the next generation of conservators to make their mark on Scotland's biggest cultural heritage project.

As part of the £45 million refurbishment of Paisley Museum, textile conservation students at the University of Glasgow, have conserved items of clothing dating from the 1830s through to the early 20th century. They include a children's dress and bonnet, as well as a crinoline 'cage' skirt and even a knitted woollen water polo uniform. The University is home to the UK's only textile conservation programme and, as a global leader, attracts students from across the world. The partnership with OneRen, the charity which is leading the refurbishment of Paisley Museum, provided a unique opportunity for students to work on objects which will go on display, rather than back into museum stores.

The textiles, in many cases, were dirty, laden with decades of industrial dirt and soot and required delicate, painstaking work to transform them. The results have been phenomenal, with marked differences in before and after photos. However, the work of a textile conservator is not about making objects look as good as new. The team helped conserve 13 objects in total, with more being worked on this academic year.

One of the more unusual pieces conserved is a knitted swimsuit from the early 20th century that belonged to a member of the Irish International water polo team.

It was exchanged with William G Peacock, an Olympic water polo player who trained at Paisley's Corporations Baths in Storie Street. Sean Kelly, Collections and Conservation Manager at OneRen, said: "The work done by the students and the team at the University of Glasgow has been exceptional, helping to bring these incredible objects back to life. This has been a fantastic partnership, bringing benefits for both the conservation and care of these textiles and for the next generation of conservators. Of course, what's even more exciting is that these items will soon be on public display at the refurbished Paisley Museum, where everyone can see for themselves the students' outstanding work. The refurbishment of Paisley Museum is Scotland's largest cultural heritage project, creating a world-class attraction with community and partnership at its core. I want to extend my thanks to the team at the University of Glasgow for their continued support and their part in making the new museum a reality." Paisley Museum & Art Gallery in Scotland is set to reopen in 2025 with a new public courtyard, a 26% increase in gallery space, hundreds more objects on display and new learning, community-making and social spaces.

The Heart of Dunfermline

The most impressive surviving medieval buildings in Scotland

Abbey, palace and nave are amongst the most impressive surviving medieval buildings in Scotland, but they've been much altered over the centuries. The huge buttresses on either side of the nave were added in the 17th century to prevent the structure from collapsing. The southwest tower did collapse in 1807 and was replaced.

Also in Dunfermline's historic quarter, the 1821 parish church is usually open to visitors. To the north of the kirkyard is the beautifully restored 16th century Abbot's House, which has a gift shop and cafe on the ground floor. The rest of the building is not usually open to the public but there are occasional open days when you can explore this fascinating survivor.

In more recent historical times, Dunfermline is perhaps best known as the birthplace of Andrew Carnegie. If the city's most famous son funded New York's Carnegie Hall, he also funded Dunfermline's Carnegie Hall. If he funded hundreds of libraries around the world, Dunfermline's was one of them. The Carnegie Library now has modern extensions housing a gallery, museum and café making it a visitor destination as well as a community resource.

Carnegie bought the Pittencrieff Estate in 1902 and donated it to his home town; it is now the popular and elegant Pittencrieff Park which extends to 76 acres and is renowned for its peacocks. The magnificent 17th century Pittencrieff House, restored not long ago, used to be a local museum but is now sadly disused. However, the Carnegie Dunfermline Trust (it was set up by Carnegie in 1903 and owns the park) hope to reopen it as a public facility in the future. It would be a fantastic focal point for the park.

The birthplace of Charles I, the shrine of St Margaret, the burial place of Robert the Bruce, the legacy of Andrew Carnegie; Dunfermline has enough to satisfy the most demanding history enthusiast.

Abbey and Palace.

Dunfermline is Scotland's newest city; it was awarded this status in 2022 as part of the late Queen Elizabeth's Platinum Jubilee Celebrations. Oddly, it's also one of Scotland's oldest cities. Like Stirling and Edinburgh, it has a historic quarter with medieval origins, in this case squeezed between the town's busy shopping streets and Pittencrieff Park. There are none of the crowds you'd associate with Edinburgh's Royal Mile, Stirling Castle or Linlithgow Palace. In fact, if tourist Edinburgh's sheer busyness wears you down, you could do worse than hop on a train to Dunfermline. If you do, you'll alight at a station that has been speedily renamed Dunfermline City; it was formerly Dunfermline Town. You also get to cross the wondrous Forth Bridge.

The capital of Scotland

Dunfermline has a very long history. In the 11th century it was the stronghold of King Malcolm III and arguably the capital of Scotland, so its city status was perhaps overdue. Ruins known as Malcolm's Tower stand in Pittencrieff Park but the name is misleading; what's visible probably dates only from the 14th century. However, Malcolm's residence may well have occupied the same site; there's a lot of 'perhaps' and 'may' when we talk about a thousand years ago. We do know that Malcolm married his Queen, Margaret, at Dunfermline in 1070.

Margaret was a particularly devout Roman Catholic and founded a religious house at Dunfermline, importing Benedictine monks from Canterbury to get it started. Four of her sons subsequently became kings of Scotland; even her youngest, David I, came to the throne, in 1124; this year sees the 900th anniversary of his accession. David was determined to see his mother's religious community become a major abbey and installed Geoffrey, the former prior of Canterbury, as abbot in 1228. David had grown up in England and he wanted to create an impressive building in stone, like the ones down south, for his mother's foundation. He imported stonemasons from Durham Cathedral and the nave of the structure they built survives in Historic Scotland's care, dominating this part of Dunfermline still.

Malcolm and Margaret both died in 1093 and were buried at Dunfermline Abbey. So too, in 1153, was David. Margaret's and Malcolm's remains were removed to a new dedicated shrine at the eastern end of the abbey church after Margaret's canonisation. The shrine was a focus for pilgrims for centuries, but Malcolm's and Margaret's remains are said to have been removed for safekeeping at the Reformation, sent to the Escorial in Spain, and then lost.

Royal burials continued at Dunfermline for centuries. William the Lion and Alexander III are among those interred in the abbey. Most famously, Robert the Bruce (minus his heart) was laid to rest there in 1329. The last royal burial was Robert, the infant son of James VI, in 1601. The locations of most have been lost; we need Scottish equivalents of those clever people who identified Richard III of England below a Leicester car park.

St Margaret

Talking of car parks, Margaret was said to pray in a cave near the centre of modern Dunfermline. In recent times the area has been built up and a car park covers much of the site, but the grotto was preserved. Accessed by a steep flight of steps and a tunnel, St Margaret's Cave became Dunfermline's oddest attraction. Since the pandemic, access has been limited so it's best to check before any planned visit. Queen (or Saint) Margaret is multiply commemorated around Dunfermline and Edinburgh, even in the name of the new city's other railway station.

By the time of the Reformation, the abbey St Margaret founded was the third richest monastic foundation in Scotland. Afterwards, many of its buildings fell into decay, but the nave of the abbey church survived in use as the parish church. In 1821, a new parish church was consecrated on the site of the former choir; its tower is ringed in stone with the words KING ROBERT THE BRUCE so's you know who's buried there. The site of St Margaret's Shrine is still identifiable, outside the church to the east, but its glory has departed.

The refectory is the most complete survivor of the monastic buildings at Dunfermline; an impressive gatehouse, which houses exhibition space and the Historic Scotland shop, links it to the monastic kitchens and the guesthouse. The spiral staircase down to the monastic kitchens is the tightest I've ever encountered, and as a history buff I've encountered quite a few. It's strictly one person at a time.

Monks had a duty to provide hospitality for visitors and maintained guesthouses. Like hotels today, guesthouses offered different grades of accommodation; guests could be lowly, penniless pilgrims, and they'd get the budget beds. Yet visitors could also be royalty. The remains of one guesthouse survive at Dunfermline, with its earliest remains going back to the 14th century. It probably offered top of the range accommodation and in the 1580s, James VI's Queen Anne employed the royal Master of Works, William Schaw, to transform the building into a royal palace. Their daughter (later Elizabeth of Bohemia, 'The Winter Queen') was born here in 1596 and in 1600 so was their son, the future Charles I. Charles was the last ruling monarch to be born in Scotland or, indeed, to be a Fifer. His son, Charles II, visited the palace as late as 1650 but it fell into disuse soon after.

The War Wolf at Stirling Castle

An illustration by Jim Proudfoot showing the siege of Stirling Castle in 1304.

In 1304, Edward I, the Hammer of the Scots, besieged Stirling Castle. It was 'game over' for the Scots when a monstrous weapon called The War Wolf arrived on the scene. Robert the Bruce looking on as the terrifying trebuchet flings a pot of "Greek fire" at Stirling Castle makes a memorable opening scene to the epic film Outlaw King. But it's quite likely that this dramatic episode really happened, and that the War Wolf isn't just the stuff of legend!

The Hammer of the Scots

After defeating William Wallace at the Battle of Falkirk in 1298, Edward I of England needed a further six years to grasp full control of Scotland. But by April 1304, nearly all of Scotland had been reconquered by "the Hammer of the Scots". William Wallace was hiding in the countryside, soon to be betrayed to the English. The Scottish nobles had surrendered, submitting to Edward's rule in exchange for the return of their lands. Only at Stirling Castle did any resistance remain. Sir William Oliphant was the governor and held the castle with about 25 men. On the ramparts, he still defiantly flew the Lion Rampant flag, a symbol of the Scottish crown. In March, Edward had the garrison declared outlaws at his parliament at St Andrews. Preparations began to extinguish the final glimmer of resistance in Scotland.

Edward decided to flex his authority in Scotland as he prepared to travel to Stirling. He no longer had to rely on troops and supplies from England alone. Now, he could order his Scottish subjects to help him take their individual castles. Scottish earls and lords were ordered to send men and horses to Stirling to assist the siege effort. They were also told not to allow their people to try and provision the garrison. Edward did not just want men, though; Stirling was one of the most defensible castles in Scotland and it would require more than bows and arrows alone for it to fall.

Materials for siege engines were shipped from Newcastle and Edward ordered the churches in Scotland to strip their roofs of lead and send it to Stirling. On top of "all the iron and great stones of Glasgow", five carts from Brechin, 12 from Dunfermline and 22 from St Andrews arrived at the castle filled with lead to be used by the English engineers for their siege engines. By the time Edward arrived at Stirling on the 22 April, the siege was ready to begin. Oliphant attempted to delay the inevitable by asking for permission to send a messenger to the guardian of Scotland, John de Soules. Considering that de Soules was in France at the time, his request was unsurprisingly denied.

The War Wolf

When the bombardment began, the "Hammer of the Scots" appears to have wanted to simply pummel this last stronghold of Scottish independence into submission. To do so, he arranged possibly the largest array of siege engines ever assembled by the kingdom of England. The Scots were to be left with no doubt about what another uprising would bring. 13 catapults and trebuchets hurled projectiles at the castle day and night. Robert the Bruce, the future king of Scots, was said to have been present during at least part of the siege. In fact, he provided Edward with several siege engines. It's possible that Bruce's experience at Stirling contributed to his policy of destroying castles during his own campaign against England.

Against all odds, Stirling Castle held out against Edward's siege. For three months, Edward watched on as the catapults flung boulders and fire at the castle walls. He was determined to see it fall. Oliphant must have been fairly surprised too. The defences were holding out and still had plenty of salted beef to feed the men. Little did he know that Edward's engineers had been working on something special...

Five master carpenters and 50 workmen had been tirelessly assembling massive wooden beams, winches and an enormous counterweight into one of the largest trebuchets ever. When Oliphant saw it in its final stages of construction he knew that it was over. He surrendered in an attempt to save his men and the castle from the destructive power of Edward's hugely expensive new toy.

However, Edward was not in a particularly generous mood. This was to be the final nail in the coffin of the Scots and he wanted them to know it. He had a gallery constructed for the ladies of the court to view this humiliating spectacle. The fearsome engine was christened the "the War Wolf". When its 140kg missile was released, it shattered Stirling Castle's curtain wall. Oliphant and his men were publicly humiliated and sent to England for imprisonment.

Political theatre

The siege had shown the overwhelming resources Edward had at his disposal and his attitude towards Scotland. This was not merely a military operation. Unlike most sieges, Edward did not want to break the castle's mighty walls just to gain a military advantage, Oliphant had already given up. Instead, he designed a piece of pure political theatre. He did not allow the garrison to surrender, so he could make a public spectacle of his power in the form of the world's largest trebuchet.

Edward wanted to quench any thirst for resistance in grand and ultimately humiliating style. In showing himself to be overwhelmingly powerful and resourceful, it was not just Scottish military forces that he wanted to crush, it was the idea of an independent Scottish kingdom, an idea of which he had become the destroyer. It was in this atmosphere of total defeat that a young Robert the Bruce launched his campaign to become king of Scots.

IN THE SCOTTISH KITCHEN

Cheddar Soda Bread

Ingredients:

350g/12oz self-raising flour
1 tsp baking powder
100g/3½oz unsalted butter
50ml/2fl oz. milk
100g/3½oz cheddar, grated
6 sprigs fresh rosemary
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

Method:

Preheat the oven to 200C/400F/Gas 6. Place the flour, baking powder and butter into a food processor and blend together. Continue blending and add the milk and cheese. Mix until the mixture just starts to come together then stop. Remove the dough with floured hands and shape into a large flat round about 3cm/1in thick. Place onto a floured baking sheet and decorate with the rosemary sprigs. Add salt and pepper to taste. Slash a criss-cross over the centre of the dough and place into the oven to bake for 15 minutes, until risen, golden and cooked through. To serve, cut up the cheddar bread into eight pieces and place in a basket or bowl.

Shepherd's pie

Ingredients:

25g/1oz. dripping
1 large onion, finely chopped
2 tbsp. olive oil
500g/1lb 2oz. minced beef or lamb
1 tbsp. plain flour
2 bay leaves
2 sprigs fresh thyme
1 anchovy, finely chopped (optional)
1 x 400g tin chopped tomatoes
2 tsp Worcestershire sauce
450ml/16fl oz. chicken, beef or lamb stock
salt and freshly ground black pepper

For the mash:

700g/1½lb potatoes, peeled and cut into halves or quarters
55ml/2fl oz. milk
75g/3oz butter
1 free-range egg yolk

Method:

In a large saucepan, heat the dripping. Add the onion and cook for 5 minutes. Meanwhile, in a large frying pan, heat a little olive oil and fry the mince, stirring, until browned all over. While the meat is frying, break up any lumps with the back of the spoon. Stir the onions and add the flour (this helps to thicken the juices) and stir. Mix well and add the bay leaves, thyme and the anchovy and stir. Add the chopped tomatoes, stock (keep a little aside, for putting into the mince pan to de-glaze the pan) and Worcestershire sauce. Add the cooked mince and then pour the stock mixture into empty mince pan, scraping off any bits of mince left in the pan. Pour the remaining stock into the pan containing the sauce mixture. Bring the mixture to the boil, adding a pinch of salt and pepper and let it simmer for about 45 minutes, stirring regularly. Preheat the oven to 200C/180C Fan/Gas 6. For the mash, boil the potatoes until tender (about 10 minutes). Drain, add the milk, butter and egg yolk, then mash until smooth. Season with salt and pepper.

Pour the meat into a 1.4 litre/2½ pint ovenproof dish and spread the mash on top, smooth over and mark with a spatula. Put the dish into the oven and cook until the surface is golden-brown.

Steak Balmoral

Ingredients:

4 (Aberdeen or alternative) Angus rib-eye steaks
30g/1oz. butter
1 shallot, chopped
4 tbsp. Scotch whisky
1 tsp coarse grain mustard
150ml/¼ pint beef stock
110g/4oz. sliced mushrooms
290ml/½ pint double cream handful of fresh parsley, chopped salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste

Method:

Pan fry the steaks to desired 'doneness' and keep warm. In a separate pan, melt the butter. Sauté the chopped shallot until soft. Add the whisky to the pan and carefully set it alight. When the flame goes out add the grain mustard, stock and mushrooms. Add the cream and bring to the boil. Simmer gently until the sauce has reduced by half, stirring from time to time. Add the chopped parsley just before serving. Season well. Pour over steaks to serve.

Bannockburn tart

Ingredients:

For the pastry:

300g/10½oz. plain flour, plus extra for dusting
125g/4oz. cold unsalted butter, cut into cubes
30g/1oz. sugar
2 free-range eggs
2 tbsp. milk (optional)

For the filling:

225g/8oz. unsalted butter, softened
225g/8oz. caster sugar
225g/8oz. ground almonds
3 free-range eggs
1 lemon, finely grated zest only
50g/2oz. plain flour
1 jar raspberry jam
flaked almonds, for sprinkling

Method:

For the pastry, place the flour, butter and sugar into a food processor and pulse until the mixture resembles breadcrumbs. Add one of the eggs and pulse until the mixture comes together to form a rough dough. If the dough is too dry, add a bit of milk. Shape the dough into a ball and wrap in cling film. Chill in the fridge for 20 minutes. Unwrap the dough and discard the cling film. Turn the dough out onto a floured work surface and roll out until large enough to line a 30x20cm/12x8in cake tin. Line the tin with the pastry, then place into the fridge to chill for a further 30 minutes. Preheat the oven to 200C/400F/Gas 6. Line the chilled tart case with a sheet of greaseproof paper and fill with baking beans. Bake for 15-20 minutes, or until the pastry is lightly golden-brown.

Remove the paper and beans and brush the pastry all over with the remaining beaten egg. Return the pastry to the oven for a further five minutes, until golden-brown. Remove the pastry from the oven and turn the oven temperature down to 180C/365F/Gas 4.

For the filling, beat the butter and sugar together in a bowl until pale and fluffy. Mix in the ground almonds, then crack in the eggs one at a time, beating well between each addition until smooth and creamy. Fold in the lemon zest and the flour. Spread some of the raspberry jam generously across the base of the pastry, leaving a 2.5cm/1inch gap around the edge. Spread the filling mixture over the jam and sprinkle over the flaked almonds. Bake the tart for 20 minutes, or until the filling is set and golden-brown. Allow to cool in the tin before serving. To serve, cut the tart into 5cm/2in squares.

The Lone Piper

Ingredients:

1 tsp lemon juice
35ml/1fl oz. blended whisky
15ml/0.5fl oz. peach liqueur
20ml/0.7fl oz. pressed apple juice cream soda
peach and apple wedges, to garnish

Method:

Mix the lemon juice, scotch, peach liqueur, apple juice in a mixing glass with a handful of ice.

Strain the mixture into a highball glass and top with cream soda. Garnish with the peach and apple wedges.

The Scottish Banner is pleased to be offering the Tartan of the Month series highlighting a variety of different, unique and colourful tartans from around the world which are registered with the Scottish Register of Tartans in Edinburgh. The Scottish Register of Tartans was established by an act of the Scottish Parliament in November 2008 and promotes and preserves information about historic and contemporary tartans from Scotland and throughout the world. Text and image use are courtesy of the Scottish Register of Tartans (SRT).

A tartan for Charlottetown, the capital city of the province of Prince Edward Island, Canada. The City was named after Queen Charlotte Sophia of England, wife of King George III. The City's flag includes Queen Charlotte's brilliant burgundy crown along with the five squares that represent the greenery of Charlottetown: Queen Square, where the Father's of Confederation met; Rochford Square; Connaught Square; Hillsborough Square and Kings Square.

The City was created under the City of Charlottetown Act on April 17th 1855, and this date is featured in the thread count of the tartan. Colours: burgundy is intended to represent Queen Charlotte along with green and white for the City's flag; blue is intended to represent the Sea and fishing industry. This tartan (reference: 14267) was designed by R Paterson, W Watters and G McGladdery and registered in April, 2024.

Remote woodland - home to Scotland's oldest wild pine - saved as part of rewilding initiative

Ordnance Survey maps from 1874 show a more extensive woodland in the glen, but by the 1990s there were only 85 ancient pines left – a number that has since been reduced further to just 57. The nature recovery project has been funded by the family of Harry Steven, who with Jock Carlisle wrote The Native Pinewoods of Scotland, published in 1959. This pioneering book recognised the special status of the pinewoods, and documented 35 wild pine populations that had managed to survive centuries of deforestation.

In the 1990s, the work of Steven and Carlisle led to the then Forestry Commission Scotland compiling Scotland's official Caledonian Pinewood Inventory, which today recognises 84 sites. Glen Loyne, on East Glen Quoich estate, lies within Affric Highlands – the UK's largest rewilding landscape. Led by Trees for Life and Rewilding Europe, this 30-year community-focused initiative will restore woodland, peatland and riverside habitats over half a million acres from Loch Ness to the west coast, supporting re-peopling and nature-based economic opportunities.

The Caledonian forest once covered much of the Highlands, but today less than 2% survives. The pinewoods are one of Scotland's richest habitats, and offer refuge to declining wildlife such as red squirrels, capercaillie and crossbills. Trees for Life is dedicated to rewilding the Highlands, including by restoring the Caledonian forest.

For further details see: www.treesforlife.org.uk.

A remote ancient woodland, home to Scotland's oldest wild Scots pine, which is at least 565-years-old – has been saved from being lost forever and given a chance of regeneration thanks to Trees for Life, as part of the charity's vast Affric Highlands rewilding initiative. The pinewood remnant of some 57 pines, all several centuries old and scattered through Glen Loyne in the northwest Highlands, was at risk from overgrazing by excessive numbers of deer – a key threat to surviving Caledonian pinewoods that prevents them from naturally regenerating.

The oldest pine has been dated to at least 1458 by St Andrews Tree-Ring Laboratory, and is believed to be even older. The ancestry of such pines stretches back to the last ice age.

Globally unique

In cooperation with the landowner, whose love of the pinewoods made the project possible, Trees for Life has created a new deer-proof 'enclosure' of fencing to protect the woodland, including the most ancient pines, and to allow young seedlings to grow without being eaten. "Glen Loyne's wild pines and other Caledonian pinewoods are globally unique, and a special part of Scotland's character and culture. Saving and restoring them offers a major opportunity for tackling the nature and climate crises," said James Rainey, senior ecologist at Trees for Life.

Trees for Life surveyed the site as part of its four-year Caledonian Pinewood Recovery Project, one of the most comprehensive surveys of the health of Scotland's pinewoods. The team found that some of the oldest pines were outside an area of fencing which had been erected in the 1990s to protect the trees from grazing pressure. Deer had also breached the fenced area. Trees for Life has now erected 1.5 kilometres of new fencing, and has connected up, extended and repaired existing sections, with the heavy-duty materials having to be transported into the remote glen by helicopter. The pinewood will now be able to naturally regenerate for the first time in decades. "Fencing is only a temporary fix, but for now it's a vital way of giving these precious pinewoods a fighting chance of recovery until effective landscape-scale deer management can be properly established," said James Rainey.

The UK's largest rewilding landscape

Historically part of the royal hunting grounds of Cluanie, the Glen Loyne woodlands would once have been home to capercaillie, wildcat, and lynx.

TENEMENT TALES - By: Brian Diamond

Canadian Brian Diamond has developed a collection of short humorous stories which were written to create a book that he could give to his 13 grandchildren. The stories are 100% true and accurately portray his childhood growing up in a tenement in the industrial suburb of Springburn in Glasgow in the 1940's and 50's.

Reuniting with Liam Oxley

I will now ask you to travel back to September 1963 I am getting married to Helen Cox from Barlanark on Sept 28th and we had sent a wedding invitation to Helen's brother John Cox who lived in Detroit, USA. John had written back to say that he was unable to attend but one of his close friends from Detroit was coming home from Detroit to Glasgow on vacation and would we mind if he attended in John's place. He said that his friend was a photographer, and he had an 8-mil camera and that would take moving pictures and show our wedding to them in Detroit when he returned from his vacation. Back in 1963, a video seemed like a good idea. On the wedding day, John's friend turns up to take pictures and his name is Dick Oxley, he turns out to be the stepbrother of my nemesis Liam from our school days and the reason that I now have a front crown. Dick and his wife Nora were exceptional people, we got on well together, he took some film and went on with his vacation. He did tell us that Liam was his stepbrother and that Liam had also immigrated to the USA, I never said that I knew him, or told him about my missing front tooth, the embarrassment of it all, way too much to bare.

The top of his game

So now, flash forward yet again 33 years to 1995, 40 years after the eventful but ill-fated boxing match, my brother-in-law John Cox is in a bar in Detroit with his friend Dick Oxley, and they are joined by Dick's brother Liam. John is telling Dick about a recent vacation he had in Canada where he was staying with his sister and brother-in-law Helen & Brian Diamond, "You remember them Dick", he said, "you were at their wedding." At this point Liam interjects and said to John, "Brian Diamond??, a red headed guy from Springburn?" "That's him" said John, and Liam replies that he went to school with me. Liam then asks John for my home telephone number and John kindly obliges.

Several days later I receive a call from Liam Oxley, 33 years since our last encounter, I am quite amazed by this, we have a great conversation which ends with me inviting him and his wife Michelle to come and see us in Toronto. It's only a five-hour drive from Michigan to Toronto, and no mention of the Long-ago boxing match was ever mentioned. Well, the fateful day arrives, and Liam and Michelle arrive at our house for what is the start of a wonderful and surprising weekend.

Firstly, Liam has this incredible Sean Connery thing going for him, he is tall, slightly balding with smouldering brown eyes and cracks a wicked smile. Couple this with a nice disposition, charming wit, a great sense of humour, and the reader can understand that Liam was like the original Bond at the top of his game, a fact that did not go unnoticed by my wife and two daughters who shamelessly stared in awe at this hottie! Well dear readers, if you have managed to reach this point, you should now be thinking how is this all going to turn out, is there a happy ending here?

The glory days of Springburn

Yes indeed, there is moral justification to this story, the moral being 'everything good comes to he who waits'. So, after we have all got to know each other and our guests are settled in, our oldest daughter Nikki, says to Liam, "My dad always tells us this story about you and him when you guys were young in Springburn. Liam lets out a great hearty laugh and with his wicked smile says, "I know, I know, he probably tells you about our boxing match and how he knocked my tooth out" GASP. Thinking that Liam was being much too gracious to me in front of my family, I said, "Aw come on now Liam, it was me that had his tooth broken". At this, Liam give us that big laugh again and proceeds to tell me what really happened in the grudge boxing match 40 years ago, and I must tell you that it was worth waiting 40 years to hear.

Apparently about one nanosecond before he knocked me out cold, I had managed to deliver my killer right uppercut on the point of his chin and broke his front tooth, but as I was going down for the long count thanks to his haymaker, I never knew that I had hit the mark. Back then, young Liam did not want anyone to know that a smaller kid like me had broken his front tooth, way too much ego damage there, so he left the club that evening in case anyone should find out. I of course was still being revived and he was blissfully gone when I woke up, and neither one of us ever knew that we had each broken each other's front tooth until 40 years later.

Liam and I looked at each other in amazement, and then we both laughed for so long that our sides ached, it was a great weekend, I brought out old school photographs and we tried to name all 42 of the kids in our class. Liam was a terrific guest and as far away from the sullen boy that I remembered as possible, The point of this story is you should never make assumptions about the canvas until the artist has finished his work, Liam was outstanding company, and we all had a great weekend together. In closing this story, as a surprise for our 40th wedding anniversary, our oldest son Paul contacted Dick Oxley in Detroit and between them they managed to recover the two minutes of 8 mil black and white film that Dick took on our wedding day in 1963 and had it transferred to a video format, it is now a very memorable and prized possession. To this date, Liam and I have met for the past 10 years on vacation in Florida, and over a few drinks recall the glory days of Springburn.

Wear your Scottish pride!

Mighty McVitie's-Edinburgh biscuits conquer Britain and beyond

McVitie & Price's Digestive factory sample, 1870-1900, Victoria and Albert Museum. Gryffindor, CC SA-BY 3.0.

By: Eric Bryan

By a long stretch the maker of the best-selling biscuits in the UK, producer of the famed Chocolate Digestives, Hobnobs and Jaffa Cakes, McVitie's is another example of Scottish inventiveness and ingenuity that started small and then snowballed into massive proportions. Incredibly, sales numbers for 2020 show that McVitie's outsold its two closest competitors by more than five to one. It all started in Edinburgh with Robert McVitie (1809-80), an apprentice baker from Dumfries.

Robert and his father William established a provision shop in Rose Street, Edinburgh in 1839, from where Robert sold his baked goods. These proved so popular that Robert opened another shop at Charlotte Place near Charlotte Square. Robert married in 1844, and with an eye toward continuing and expanding the family business, sent his two sons Robert Jr and William to study bakery on the Continent.

Rose Street

Kenilworth Bar, 152, 154 Rose Street, Edinburgh. Enric, CC SA-BY 4.0.

Sandwiched between George Street and Princes Street, the narrow Rose Street was constructed in 1770-81 as a secondary east-west road running from St Andrew Square to Charlotte Square.

Originally lined with three-storey houses, as of 1820 more and more shops were in operation on Rose Street. This trend progressed until by the mid-20th century the entire street was devoted to shops and bars. The street became pedestrian-only in the 1980s. The Eagle Buildings (1904) and Kenilworth Bar (1899), the latter named after one of Sir Walter Scott's Waverly novels, are notable establishments on the street.

Royal seal of approval

In the 1870s McVitie's had premises at Antigua Street, East London Street, and Queensferry Street. Charles Edward Price joined the firm in 1875 as sales rep. After Robert passed away in 1880, Robert Jr took over the Queensferry establishment. Robert Jr expanded into Merchant Street in 1884, and a few years later hired biscuit maker Alexander Grant of Forres as bakery foreman. Price's success as salesman led to the partnership McVitie & Price.

McVitie's is another example of Scottish inventiveness and ingenuity that started small and then snowballed into massive proportions.

Business was so brisk and demand so high that the firm couldn't keep up the required production, so in 1888 the team established the massive St Andrews Biscuit Works in the Edinburgh suburbs. The company marked another milestone when in 1892 Alexander Grant developed the Digestive biscuit which became a McVitie & Price flagship product. McVitie & Price received the royal seal of approval in 1893 after being requested to bake the wedding cake for Princess Mary and the Duke of York. Going from strength to strength, surging trade south of the border led the firm to establish a factory in Harlesden, North London in 1902.

McVitie's Rich Tea biscuit. Sean Whitton, CC SA-BY 3.0.

After Robert Jr passed away in 1910, Alexander Grant became the firm's main shareholder and managing director.

With the outbreak of the Great War in 1914, the British government called upon McVitie & Price to apply its expertise and factories to producing 'iron ration' plain biscuits for the British Army. This venture required the opening of yet another production facility, this time in Manchester, in order to meet the demand. The business continued to grow post-war, and in 1922 McVitie & Price acquired Simon Henderson & Sons, an Edinburgh bakery. In 1923 Alexander Grant donated a £100,000 endowment for the establishment of the National Library of Scotland. McVitie & Price began focusing primarily on biscuit production from 1924, as biscuits kept well, were easily portable and handy to eat on the run. High-profile travellers who used and endorsed the biscuits included George Binney, who led the Oxford University Arctic Expedition in 1924. The firm's concentration on biscuits led to experimenting with chocolate and the creation of the Homewheat Chocolate Digestive brand biscuit, now famously known as McVitie's Chocolate Digestives.

A titan on the British and world stage

Pastries were still on the McVitie & Price agenda, however, with the now renowned Jaffa Cake appearing in 1927. Flavoured by sweet Jaffa oranges and a tangerine oil jam, the Jaffa Cake was the subject of a controversy when Her Majesty's Customs and Excise declared that the item was a biscuit and not a cake, and so subject to VAT.

The firm succeeded in proving to the courts that the Jaffa Cake is a cake, and decades later the treat remains VAT-free. Another £100,000 came from Alexander Grant in 1928, this time for the construction of the National Library site on the George IV Bridge in Edinburgh. The deprivations and sacrifices of World War II had a profound impact on McVitie & Price. So great was the effect of these challenges that while the company was producing 370 varieties of biscuits and cakes in 1939, in 1945 only 10 different McVitie & Price items were on offer. McVitie & Price had more royal involvement when in 1947 they made the more than 2.5-metre-tall wedding cake for Princess Elizabeth and Lieutenant Philip Mountbatten. Working amidst Britain's food-rationing restrictions, the cake's ingredients were imported from overseas. In 1948 McVitie & Price merged with Macfarlane, Lang & Co Ltd to form United Biscuits Group. United Biscuits acquired Edinburgh biscuit company William Crawford and Sons in the early 1960s. William McDonald & Sons, the Glasgow maker of Penguin brand biscuits, came into the United Biscuits fold in 1965, followed by Carr's of Carlisle in 1972.

Yet another McVitie's breakthrough occurred in 1985 with the introduction of Hobnobs. So popular was this biscuit that McVitie's brought out its chocolate variant only two years later, soon followed by another hit, Boosters. Adding to its century-long string of successes, McVitie's introduced its Milk Chocolate Caramel Digestive biscuit in 1999, and in 2004 the product won the Dunk for Britain campaign, earning the title 'Nation's favourite McVitie's dunking biscuit'.

In an effort to make its biscuits more healthful, McVitie's reduced the saturated fat content of its Rich Tea and Hobnobs brands by fifty per cent in 2009. The company performed more royal duties when in 2011 it was commissioned to create a groom's cake for the wedding of Catherine Middleton and Prince William – a no-bake cake with McVitie's Rich Tea biscuits as a main ingredient! Marching further on into the 21st century, McVitie's has introduced McVitie's Sweet™, Digestive Nibbles and Digestive Thins. What would Robert McVitie think that well over a century on, his Edinburgh-based bakery is a titan on the British and world stage?

Digestive biscuits

McVitie's Chocolate Digestive biscuit. Jolly Janner, public domain.

In 1839 two Scottish doctors originated the semi-sweet digestive biscuit as a digestive aid. The high sodium bicarbonate content of the recipe was believed to work as an antacid.

A digestive biscuit's basic ingredients are coarse brown wheat flour, sugar, malt extract, vegetable oil, wholemeal, raising agents and salt. In 1851 brown meal digestive biscuits were offered for sale in The Lancet, and Huntley & Palmers of Berkshire advertised digestive biscuits in 1876. The digestive biscuit developed by Alexander Grant and manufactured by McVitie's was made from a secret recipe which is still in use today. McVitie's Digestives remain the best-selling biscuit in the UK, with the Chocolate Digestives consistently voted the UK's number one snack food.

Jaffa oranges

Sliced McVitie's Jaffa Cake. Asim18, public domain.

Named for the ancient Canaanite port city, now part of Tel Aviv, Jaffa oranges were developed by Arab farmers in the mid-19th century. Also called the Shamouti, the Jaffa orange is oval with a thick, deep orange-coloured peel.

Due to the thickness and toughness of its peel the Jaffa travels well and so is an ideal fruit for export. Despite its hardy skin, the Jaffa is easy to peel and the flesh tastes sweet and is almost seedless.
